“The Karuk have conducted their ceremonies along the Klamath River since time immemorial, passing them down from generation to generation,” said Six Rivers National Forest Supervisor Ted McArthur. “The landscapes and rivers that we think of as the Six Rivers and Klamath national forests are woven into who the Karuk are as a people.”

Beginning at Sarah Totten Campground and continuing down the Klamath River, signs will be posted to alert river users when and where launching is allowed and take-out encouraged. Out of respect for the annual ceremonies, the public is requested to take watercraft out at Wingate Bar and not to continue downstream of Wingate between July 20-24 and August 14-23. During the July 20-24 period, the next launching point available downstream of Wingate Bar will be the Ferry Point River Access. On August 14, and during the August 16-23 period, the next launching point available downstream of Wingate Bar will be the Independence River Access. The Independence River Access will be closed on August 15.
